To Whom It Concerns:

It has just been brought to my attention that Ms Sharon Noble has been denied intervenor status in hearings regarding BC Hydro's new Tariff application. Ms Noble wrote a letter regarding this application to the BCUC, that I deemed to be on my behalf, because, due to electro-sensitivity I am unable to spend sufficient time at a computer, in order to read and study the document. I was grateful that she addressed some of the issues that concerned me about some of the items in the revisions of the Tariff that will affect people, like me, who have safety concerns, in regard to Smart Meters. From what I was able to glean from the document, it appears that new regulations will include punitive increases in regulations and fees that would be added for people who feel the need to protect their home, health and privacy.

I am writing to ask you to explain to me why Ms Noble has been denied intervenor status, and if you will please allow her to speak on behalf of me and others, who are unable to take on this task, or who are not even aware that these Tariff changes are being requested by BC Hydro.
