

Name: Sandra Currie

Date: October 07, 2017

Another reason to kill the project is that the head of the IMF is warning us that every economy is in jeopardy because of climate change. So we need to use our financial resources to cover the costs of the damage we've already created, not create more. Insurance companies are already starting to not give estimates for coverage in areas that have been affected by severe weather occurrences. Eventually, they will simply file bankruptcy, and the costs of cleanups will fall on individuals and governments.